19th/20th June — Middle of the Year?

Dear All,

I just can't believe that Monday is the summer solstice! But while we are at about the middle of the year, hopefully the vast majority of the summer is still to come. Not having had a proper holiday for years I was so much hoping that, with my truck now fully repaired, Thumper and I could wander off and have ten days away totally disconnected while roaming through some unexplored areas of this beautiful land. But that might just have to wait until 2022.

Happy Father's Day

Monday is National Indigenous Peoples' Day in Canada

While the roots of this day go back to the end of the Second World War, it was in 1982 that the body, now known as the Assembly of First Nations, started a campaign to have this day officially recognised, which happened across Canada in 1996. This means that this is “the national 25th anniversary of celebrating the heritage, diverse cultures and outstanding achievements of First Nations, Inuit and Métis peoples!” (Picture and quote are from the Government's website)

Changing hats slightly, as Provincial Spiritual Advisor to the Catholic Women's League I want to highlight the good work the League is doing in pursuing all aspects of equality and recognising the dignity of all peoples. The League's National President, Anne Gorman, recently wrote to Archbishop Richard Gagnon:

As stated in the League's Executive Handbook under the dignity and rights of persons, "It is our responsibility, as Christian women and members of a national organization, to play an active role in opposing discrimination wherever and in whatever form it appears." Members anticipate that the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, under your direction and with the help of the Holy Spirit and Our Lady's intercession, will find the words and actions to bring about healing.

Obviously with the revelations that have come out of the Residential School in Kamloops, this year's National Indigenous Peoples' Day will have a special significance, or perhaps a particular poignancy. On Monday please remember the First Nations Peoples of Canada in your prayers.

For Information: Many people have asked me technical questions about the Residential Schools and really I don't know the answer to these questions, and sadly, much of the press has not answered them well. So at the end of this e-mail I have included four pages from the Toronto Archdiocese entitled, "Frequently Asked Questions Regarding Residential Schools"; I hope it might help.

And Finally...

Thumper is all a bit confused with this Fathers' Day thing; no, his confusion is not where the apostrophe should go, but how he should mark the day. He is a 'pure-bred' so he knows who is 'father' is (even if his mother only met that dog once!) But then where do I come into this?

He has concluded that he will get one of his favourite things and give it to me... but he also thinks he might chew it just a little bit more so the ends aren't too sharp. You might want to do the same for any Dads in your life!

With prayers,

Fr. David @ Thumper

Attending Sunday Mass

We Are Open!!!

In case you missed it, we are now allowed up to fifty people at any Sunday Mass.

Firstly, and most importantly, we must remember to take seriously the Covid protocols of ‘hands, face and space’: sanitise one’s hands, keep one’s face covered, and keep a good space around you.

Registering Upon Arrival at Church

In Sparwood they are in the process of setting up a system for those who regularly attend Sunday Mass. People will give all their contact details just once and these will be double checked (hand written e-mail addresses are not always that clear!), and then they will have some other easy identifier, like the person’s envelope number. This means that once registered a person coming to church just has to confirm the health questions and give their envelope number. Hopefully this will simplify and speed up entry to Mass and ensure we have good and accurate contact information. This might be extended to the other parishes. So please be aware of what is happening. And if your name is difficult to spell or you have a complicated e-mail address, you could always write it down clearly and give it to the welcomer.

Communion After Mass

Even with the churches open I will continue to distribute Communion after Mass for those who as yet can’t join us in the building. But with obviously a lot fewer people coming to Communion after Mass I have slightly revise the times when it will be available. So the new times are:

Fernie – 6pm to 6:30pm
Sparwood – 10am to 11am
Elkford – 5pm to 5:30pm

Everyone still needs to be careful.

Even having a Covid vaccination doesn’t prevent you carrying the disease and giving it to others! We are told that it does reduce the chances of you passing it on and it does greatly reduce the severity of the illness should you contract it, but it is not an absolute guarantee that you will not pass it on to someone for whom it might be life threatening. Thus if you are vaccinated, please don’t say, “I’m okay, I have had the jab, so I can go and hug people.” This might be given as a gesture of love and kindness, but now is not the time for this. Everyone still needs to be careful.

Many times I have been in a pastoral situation where someone has said, “Father, I don’t mind if you take off your mask.” That is kind, and even if everyone in the room has been vaccinated, it might be that the last person we were talking to was carrying the virus and, without knowing it, one of us is now carrying it. The person who we had contact with might not have had any symptoms and we might not have symptoms, but the virus might still be there. Everyone still needs to be careful.

Frequently Asked Questions Regarding Residential Schools – June 2021

There has been considerable media coverage and discussion in recent days following the discovery of children's remains at the former residential school in Kamloops, British Columbia. The discovery has reopened a painful wound for many in our country and has identified the need for all Canadians to learn more about our history, the role of residential schools as part of that journey and to seek the truth regarding all those who suffered and continue to do so to this day.

Archdiocese of Toronto

The abuse of Indigenous peoples is a dark chapter in the history of Canada and the Catholic Church. While the Church has cared for and served Indigenous people in many ways, it is undeniable that some members of the Church undermined the dignity of First Nations people. There is evidence that much of this abuse occurred at residential schools, which were largely operated by Christian denominations.

This communication is intended to provide some context and address some frequently asked questions about this important issue. We must all join in the collective efforts on the path to healing and reconciliation with Indigenous peoples.

1. I am deeply troubled by the discovery of children's remains in Kamloops on the site of a former residential school. Who operated the school?

The discovery of 215 unmarked graves in late May 2021 will require further investigation to help seek the truth of who these children were, how they died and how they were buried so far from home. The school was built and initially operated by the federal government, opening in 1890. In 1892, the federal government asked a Catholic order, the Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate, to take over operations, which they did until 1969. The federal government resumed operations of the school from 1969 until its closure in 1979.

The religious order issued a formal apology in 1991 in addition to paying settlements to residential school survivors. An excerpt of the apology reads as follows:

"We wish to apologize in a very particular way for the instances of physical and sexual abuse that occurred in those schools...Far from attempting to defend or rationalize these cases of abuse in any way, we wish to state publicly that we acknowledge they were inexcusable, intolerable and a betrayal of trust in one of its most serious forms. We deeply and very specifically, apologize to every victim of such abuse and we seek help in searching for means to bring about healing."

2. Is the Catholic Church assisting with the efforts to seek the truth in Kamloops and elsewhere?

Father Ken Thorson, current Superior of the Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate, has reached out to the Tk'emlups te Secwépemc Chief Rosanne Casimir to offer assistance and to express sympathies following the discovery of the remains of 215 children on the grounds of the former school. Father Thorson has communicated that records from the Kamloops Indian Residential School are with the Royal British Columbia Museum and has indicated the order will assist in sharing any information regarding records at this and other locations where the order operated schools.

Among the groups of dioceses and religious communities that operated residential schools, there is a spirit of cooperation with Indigenous peoples with regards to personal records and information relating to the former schools. At the same time, there are also privacy rights, including those of Indigenous peoples who attended these schools, which need to be taken into consideration on a case by case basis.

3. Why aren't we hearing an apology from the Catholic Church in Canada?

There is no such entity as the Catholic Church of Canada. Each Catholic diocese and religious order is an independent legal entity. Despite this reality, in 1991, Canadian Catholic Bishops, along with leaders of men and women religious communities, issued a statement that “We are sorry and deeply regret the pain, suffering and alienation that so many experienced” at residential schools. Approximately 16 out of 70 Roman Catholic dioceses in Canada were associated with the former residential schools, in addition to about three dozen out of over one hundred Catholic institutes (commonly referred to as religious orders). Each diocese and institute is corporately and legally responsible for its own actions.

Many of the dioceses or orders operating schools have offered apologies, dating back to the early 1990s. In recent days, many bishops throughout Canada have offered statements and introduced other initiatives to continue our ongoing path to truth and reconciliation.

A listing of some of the numerous apologies and other resources can be found at:

www.cccb.ca/indigenous-peoples/indian-residential-schools-and-trc/

4. Did the Archdiocese of Toronto operate residential schools?

The Archdiocese of Toronto did not operate residential schools yet we share the collective grief and sorrow as the result of any representative of the Catholic Church inflicting pain or abuse on an individual, especially vulnerable children.

5. Have Indigenous leaders met with the Pope?

Yes, in 2009, the National Chief of the Assembly of First Nations, Phil Fontaine, along with other Indigenous representatives, had a moving encounter with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican. In describing the meeting, Chief Fontaine told the media he hoped the expression of regret would “close the book” on the issue of apologies for residential school survivors.

Another attendee at the meeting with Pope Benedict, Edward John, Grand Chief of the First Nations Summit in British Columbia, said the Pope acknowledged the suffering of those who are still living with the effects of their experiences at the schools. In comments to the media he said, “I think in that sense, there was that apology that we were certainly looking for.”

The Catholic Church continues to work alongside and with Indigenous communities in order to foster an ongoing culture of reconciliation. There have been, and continue to be, numerous initiatives by Catholic dioceses, institutes and organizations throughout Canada to assist with support the ongoing healing and reconciliation journey.

6. I understand there was a formal request in the Truth and Reconciliation Commission report for the Pope to personally apologize in Canada?

The Holy Father has already been invited to Canada by the present and previous Prime Minister. The Catholic Bishops of Canada, including the current and past Presidents of the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, have assured the Pope they would joyfully and gratefully welcome him in a visit to Canada. Likewise, in a number of instances, Canadian Bishops, individually and collectively, have formally invited Pope Francis to visit, including with specific reference to Call to Action #58 (a recommendation of the 2015 Truth & Reconciliation Commission asking the Holy Father to apologize on Canadian soil within one year of the report being issued).

Pope Francis has encouraged the Bishops to continue taking leadership and assuming their proper role in pursuing their pastoral engagement and reconciliation efforts with Indigenous peoples, including ongoing conversations among the Bishops and Elders. This work builds on past apologies, dialogue and the desire to move forward together.

A formal papal visit involves a number of steps from both government and church leadership as well as significant logistical, financial commitments and other considerations. No papal visit has been publicly announced at this time.

7. Will the Catholic Church pay financial reparations to those harmed by residential schools?

The Catholic entities that operated residential schools were part of the 2006 Indian Residential School Settlement Agreement (IRSSA).

The Holy See and the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops were never involved in running the former schools. The “Roman Catholic Entities” named as parties in the IRSSA were legally deemed to have fulfilled the requirements of the settlement agreement by a judicial review. Following this review, the former Conservative government released the entities from further obligations – a decision which the present Liberal government did not appeal.

The 50 or so individual entities which signed the IRSSA paid:

- i. $29 million in cash (less legal costs);
- ii. more than the required $25 million of “in-kind” contributions; and
- iii. an additional $3.7 million from a “best efforts” campaign.

Those same entities, together with other dioceses, institutes and national Catholic organizations, continue to be involved in efforts across the country to provide in-kind contributions, which go well beyond the scope of the Indian Residential School Settlement Agreement.

8. Where can I find additional resources?

Our Lady of Guadalupe Circle is a Catholic coalition of Indigenous people, bishops, lay movements, clergy and institutes of consecrated life, engaged in renewing and fostering relationships between the Catholic Church and Indigenous Peoples in Canada. For more information visit:
